

MEVIT3427 – Media, War and Journalism

Take home exam, spring 2016

Monday May 9th – Thursday May 12th

The exam is to be submitted in Fronter by Thursday May 12th at 14:00.
The exam consists of two (2) pages.

Before you start writing your exam, you must make sure you have read and understood the University's information regarding cheating, found here:

<https://www.uio.no/english/studies/admin/examinations/cheating/index.html>

You must also read the information about proper use of sources and citations, found here:

<https://www.uio.no/english/studies/admin/examinations/sources-citations/>

You are no longer required to hand in a statement regarding cheating (fuskeerklæring) when you submit a take-home exam at the Faculty of Humanities.

Using examples and explanations to support your answer, please assess to what extent advances in communication technologies have changed the reporting of conflict, and with what consequences on our society.

Relate the discussion to historical cases as well as more recent trends. Use relevant theory and concepts from the course readings and class discussions.

Please read the information about the exam below:

Your exam submission must be written in English.

The submitted paper may be up to 10 pages (one page is calculated to 2300 characters without spaces) excluding front page and references. The exam must be submitted as either a Word-document (.docx), or in PDF format (.pdf). We recommend using PDF. Other file formats, such as .odt or .pages, will not be accepted.

Your front page must include your candidate number, and the name of the file you upload should be your candidate number (xxxxxx.pdf/xxxxxx.doc).

Please see our website for more practical information about exams at the Department of Media and Communication:
