

Europe – Eurasia: tougher cooperation climate in higher education?

STINA TORJESEN
SAR 13 November 2015

KIMEP – UIA:

Excellence in teaching on global business and international relations

UNIVERSITY OF AGDER

Committed to Excellence

KIMEP UNIVERSITY

Global liberalism is entering harder times, and the space for a 'middle-ground ethics' comes into sharper focus

Andrew Hurrell, Montague Burton Professor of International Relations, University of Oxford

The 'structurally non-ideal character of international politics' entails...

- power and order trumps justice
- greater heterogeneity of interests and values
- greater capacity for effective contestation
- role of moral values more difficult in international life and in particular inter-state relations

Implications for bilateral university cooperation

Thank you!

stina.torjesen@uia.no

@stinatorjesen