Notes for all questions:

You must use at least 3 texts from the reading list. You are welcome to use more. You can draw on other readings and sources, news items, film and music to make your paper stronger, but with at least the stipulated number of reading list texts. Discussion questions require that you have a viewpoint that you argue well for and balance against other possible positions. Feel free to write creatively, expressing informed opinion. Remember to place texts in their historical context and in relation to each other

Exam Questions:

Answer one (1) of the following three questions:

1. What does it mean to see Europe as an ethnographic region in a non-Eurocentric way? Discuss with examples.

2. Studying the Mediterranean or the Balkans and other sites related to Europe can help us think beyond "methodological nationalism". Discuss with examples.

3. Does the idea of a "normal life" or "normality" that people reference in some syllabus readings might have something to do with specific ideas of Europe and "Europpeanness"? Discuss with examples.

Good luck!
